- WHEREAS, the Northwest Ordinance stands as one of the three most important documents in our development as a nation, along with the Declaration of Independence in 1776 and the Constitution, signed on September 17, 1787; and
- WHEREAS, the Northwest Ordinance provided the means by which new territories became states on an equal footing with the 13 original states, assuring the orderly growth of the United States as it expanded westward, and 31 states of the Union, including Indiana, achieved statehood under the provisions of the Ordinance of 1787; and
- WHEREAS, the Articles of Compact of the Northwest Ordinance assured citizens of certain basic rights and freedoms, including religious freedom, the right to trial by jury and the writ of habeas corpus, the sanctity of property and contracts, the encouragement of education, and the prohibition of slavery and involuntary servitude; and
- WHEREAS, many of these rights and freedoms were not a part of the Constitution until passage in 1791 of the Bill of Rights and the passage of amendments following the Civil War; and
- WHEREAS, the Indiana Historical Bureau, Indiana Supreme Court, Commission for Continuing Legal Education, and other partners are hosting noted historian and legal scholar Paul Finkelman for a free program on July 13 on "The Northwest Ordinance, Slavery, and Indiana,";
