Course Description:
AP® English Language and Composition teaches students how writers use language to create meaning. Students will read and analyze a variety of nonfiction genres, including essays, journalism articles, political writings, science writings, nature writings, autobiographies, biographies, diaries, speeches, history writings, and criticisms. CR2 The primary focus is on writing evidence-based analytical, synthesis, and argument essays and analyzing the rhetorical choices of a wide range of nonfiction writers. CR1 In addition to analyzing written texts, students will also study visual rhetoric such as photographs, advertisements, and political cartoons. As stated in the AP English Language and Composition Course Description, students learn to "evaluate, synthesize, and cite research to support their arguments . . .
[and] read and analyze rhetorical elements and their effects in nonfiction texts." Students learn critical reading and writing skills, which are honed by the close reading, writing, and revising of original essays.

This content is presented in an online course through which students view lectures from experienced, highly qualified instructors; access nonfiction rhetoric (written and visual); and practice close reading and writing skills. Students are provided with continual feedback from instructors via phone, instant messages, emails, discussion threads, and live chats, as well as written feedback on their assignments. In addition to scaffolded learning focused on the big ideas of the course, each unit includes a lesson focused on test-taking skills designed to help students be successful on the AP Language and Composition exam.
