

REQUIREMENTS TO OBTAIN A FIRST-TIME INDIANA RADIOLOGY LICENSE / CERTIFICATE

The Indiana Department of Health (IDOH), Division of Radiology and Weights & Measures, issues radiology permits, licenses, and certificates for eight categories. Indiana does not have reciprocity with other states. A permit, license or certificate from another state is not accepted. Permits are required to complete clinical training in Indiana. They are issued to individuals when they enroll in an approved radiography education program. After individuals complete the approved education program, clinical training (with an active permit), and pass an approved exam, they may apply for a license/certificate.

To obtain a first-time Indiana Dental Radiographer License, individuals must complete the following:

- Graduate from a CODA-accredited program in radiography for dental assistants or an IDOH-approved radiography education program for dental assistants. Current CODA-accredited programs for dental assisting are at this link: <https://coda.ada.org/en/find-a-program/search-dental-programs#t=us&sort=%40codastatecitysort%20ascending>. Current IDOH-approved programs are at this direct link: Dental.
AND
- Complete clinical training (proficiency certification). If attending a CODA-accredited program, an active student permit for dental radiography is required to do clinical training in Indiana. If attending an IDOH-approved program, an active provisional permit for dental radiography is required to do clinical training in Indiana. The clinical training form (Application for Proficiency Certification for Limited Radiographer) is only required for individuals who attended the IDOH-approved programs and must be completed by the program director of the IDOH-approved program or by the licensed practitioner, who oversaw the clinical training while the provisional permit was active.
