

To obtain first-time Indiana Nuclear Medicine Technologist license, individuals must complete the following:

- Graduate from an approved NMTCB nuclear medicine technology program. Current programs are at this link: <https://www.nmtcb.org/exams/nuclear-medicine/schools>. (Students are required to have an active student permit to complete clinical training in Indiana.)
AND
- Pass the NMTCB nuclear medicine technology exam
AND
- Be currently certified and registered by the NMTCB with credentials CNMT
AND
- Apply for Nuclear Medicine Technologist license online at this link: mylicense.in.gov. Or print, complete, and mail license application (Application for Radiology License) and check/money order for $60 to address on form. More details are at <https://www.in.gov/health/cshcr/medical-radiology-services/>.
- IDOH will check credentials on NMTCB's verification website: <https://nmtcb.org/verification>).

(OR)

- Graduate from an approved ARRT nuclear medicine technology program. Current programs are at this link: <https://www.arrt.org/pages/about-the-profession/learn-about-the-profession/recognized-educational-programs>. (Students are required to have an active student permit to complete clinical training in Indiana.)
AND
- Pass the ARRT exam for nuclear medicine technology
AND
- Be currently certified and registered by the ARRT with credentials RT(N)
AND
- Apply for Nuclear Medicine Technologist license online at this link: mylicense.in.gov. Or print, complete, and mail license application (Application for Radiology License) and check/money order for $60 to address on form. More details are at <https://www.in.gov/health/cshcr/medical-radiology-services/>.
- IDOH will check credentials on ARRT's verification website: <https://www.arrt.org/pages/verify-credentials>).