The Indiana Young Readers Center at the Indiana State Library has been developing six circulating escape room kits for Indiana librarians and teachers to check out and use with their patrons and students. The kits are not yet ready, but the Young Readers Center is looking for Indiana librarians and teachers who might be interested in testing the kits while they are still in beta form. The Young Readers Center is also interested in knowing how many librarians and teachers might be interested in checking out the kits once they are completed in early 2025.

The kits are "escape room" type experiences where students are left in a room with clues, puzzles and locked boxes and must work together to search the room, crack codes and eventually unlock the last box that will allow them to escape. All six experiences include narratives based on Indiana history and feature facsimiles of actual primary source documents located in the Indiana State Library's collections or collections from the Library of Congress.

Topics covered in the escape room kits include:

- President Benjamin Harrison, featuring the only Indiana president to date.
- Genealogy, featuring a diary written in 1904 by a 9-year-old from Rensselaer.
- Aviation, featuring Octave Chanute, an early aviator from Indiana who worked with the Wright Brothers.
- Basketball, featuring the Crispus Attucks High School state championships in 1955 and 1956.
- Quakers, featuring Levi and Catherine Coffin, Indiana Quakers and abolitionists.
- Hoosier women, featuring Madame C. J. Walker, Amelia Earhart, Eva Kor and more.

The kits have been designed with varying levels of difficulty, so that students young and old will be able to enjoy the mysteries.

Interested librarians and teachers should fill out this form. Those interested will be able to indicate if they want to be notified in early 2025 for a chance to be one of the first to book a kit. They'll also be able to indicate if they are more specifically interested in testing a kit out this fall in 2024. Those who test a kit for the Young Readers Center are expected to provide feedback to the Indiana State Library on how the test went. The kits were designed for middle and high school students and are best used in small groups of four to eight students. Those who have a larger group of students might consider booking multiple kits, as four copies of each kit will be available.

Three in-person trainings, as well as a webinar about these kits, are coming in October. Trainings are currently open for registration.

Click here for training dates and to register. In addition to these upcoming training events, those interested can view a webinar on this topic that was presented at Government Information Day in May of 2024. The presentation can be viewed here.

ALA Alzheimer's and Brain Awareness Month survey now available

June is Alzheimer's and Brain Awareness Month. Unfortunately, a growing percentage of older Americans are being diagnosed Street in Austin. Credit: Austin History Center.

On June 19, 1865, federal troops arrived in Galveston, Texas, to seize control of the state and ensure that United States Army's "General Order No. 3" was read and enforced. The General Order proclaimed that all enslaved people in the United States were free; a reiteration of the Emancipation Proclamation signed two- and one-half years earlier by President Abraham Lincoln.

The date was celebrated by formerly enslaved Black Americans, with the oldest known celebration traced back to 1866. June 19 celebrations marked the rich history and culture of those formerly enslaved as well as their freedom. From Texas, the tradition spread east and south. Juneteenth, a combination of June and nineteenth fell into parlance, and so the date was given its name.

Revived during Civil Rights and again during the Black Lives Matter movement, Sheila Jackson Lee, a Texas Democrat, introduced a measure to commemorate the celebration and fix the date as a national holiday. On June 17, 2021, President Joe Biden, along with Congress, signed the Juneteenth National Independence Day Act.

Free training for librarians and library employees on LinkedIn Learning

Text and Learn for Kindergarten program information with Alzheimer's or other related dementias. According to the Alzheimer's Association, nearly 7 million Americans are living with Alzheimer's. By 2050, this number is projected to rise to nearly 13 million. This means that librarians are likely already serving this population in their libraries.

The Library Services for Dementia and Alzheimer's interest group of the American Library Association, a part of ALA's Office for Diversity, Literacy and Outreach Services group, advocates for programs and services for people with Alzheimer's and related dementias and their care partners.

LSDA is currently conducting a survey of libraries nationwide in an effort to build a database of programming resources that can be shared with all libraries to help better serve this growing segment of communities.

Those currently offering any programs or services, specifically for patrons with dementia or their care partners, are invited to complete this short 10-question survey.

LSDA thanks participants for their consideration.

Please feel free to reach out to Christine M. Johnson, co-chair of the Library Services for Dementia and Alzheimer's Interest Group, with any questions about the survey.

and are specifically for book purchases, meaning they can't be used for administrative or operational uses.

The LLCF no longer provides grants to schools, public libraries or other libraries for the purchase of children's books, with the exception of bookmobiles.

The bookmobile grant program provides grants for purchasing children's fiction or nonfiction books. The books are to be available for checkout by young people for pleasure reading or, perhaps, as a source of information for a school assignment. The library grant program does not provide funds for book distribution programs, atlases, dictionaries, basal readers or similar texts, workbooks or similar instructional tools, magazine subscriptions, or for textbooks or encyclopedias.

The LLCF bookmobile grant program provides grants for the purchase of books for children preschool through grade eight. Only organizations within the United States, its territories or commonwealths are eligible.

Grant awardees will be asked to return a brief questionnaire and to provide documentation of grant spending.

The last grant within a given year will be awarded by Oct. 30. To be considered by that date, applications must be postmarked by Sept 1.

Applications postmarked after Sept. 1 will be evaluated early the following year during the next cycle. Click here to apply.
